THE OLD STEAM ROLLER'S USEFUL DAYS ARE OVER

Obsolete Machine Goes To Smash as Its New-fangled Successor Proves Its Superiority.

AFTER years of service on the streets and roads of Honolulu and new only in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, the Public Works department steam roller, which has been in use on the Pal road since that splendid thoroughfare was begun, broke down yesterday and now lies on the Nuuanu road a wreck. Like the famous "one-hoss shay," it went to pieces all at once and may hereafter be consigned to the scrap iron heap, or possibly be loaned to the Hilo municipality when that burg sports a mayor and aldermen.

The old roller has seen hard service and has helped in making many of Honolulu's streets, but it was of an almost obsolete type and was unfit for the heavy demands of modern street-laying. Road Supervisor Campbell says the wreck was due to the breaking of a crank-shaft. The rollers are worn out and in some places are so thin that there has been great danger of their bursting.

Mr. Campbell does not believe that patching up the roller would render it serviceable even on even ground where great steam pressure is not necessary. The new twenty-one-ton steam roller which lately arrived for the department was given a trial yesterday in the yard of the department stables. The machinery was found in excellent condition and everything ran in a satisfactory manner. One of the features of this roller is the steam steering gear. By operating a wheel attached to a long rod, valves are alternately opened and shut which moves the steering apparatus with perfect ease.

A child could run this part of the mechanism. In the old rollers considerable elbow grease was required to move the steering parts. The roller can be adjusted to a speed of five miles an hour over smooth surfaces or to a greater speed.

The big rear wheels are beveled, which insures the roads being packed better than by the old straight flange wheels which caused unequal packing. The roller will be put in commission on Monday next on the King street repairs.
